OWNER NOT FOUND.

Boat With Clothing Inside Floating
in River.

A power boat was found floating in the Thames river off Scotch Cap early Saturday morning, and the find developed a mystery, for the boat was a cont and hat. Who the owner of the boat is for how she came to be adrift is not known.

The boat was found by Charles Serafin of New London, who is summering at Scotch Cap. Before daylight he heard a power boat on the river. A few minutes later the engine stopped.
Mr. Serafin gave the incident no further thought until later, when he saw a motorboat drifting a short distance from shore. On the seat of the deserted boat was a man's hat and coat. The police were notified.

The supposition is that the boat was moored somewhere along the river with the painter not securely tied, and that the craft was carried into midstream by the tide. It is among the possibilities that the occupant might have fallen into the river. A day or two should confirm or deny this theory.
The owner of the boat should be seeking its recovery.

Enjoying remarkable health for her years, Mrs. Mary Palmer Pellett, of No. 123 Broadway today enters the rank of the centenarians of this city, August 24th being the 100th anniversary of her birth on the old Palmer homestead in Preston, on the road from Norwich to Jewett City. Although Mrs. Pellett has the use of all her faculties and is able to leave her room and get around the house, she has requested that there be no formal observance of the day, and it will be marked very quietly only by the all, although length of years has been a characteristic of the family. She lived to a good old age. A cousin also, Caroline Brown of Scotland, was one to make a record for longevity, never reaching the centenary mark, as she passed away three years ago, just five days short of the 100 years.

For about the past 62 years Mrs.
Pellett has resided on Broadway, most of the time in the house where she now lives, which was built by her husband, Luther Pellett, who was a grocer in this city and died thirty-seven years ago.
